

DEC 1859

Mrs Tudor said she had written to Anne that that meet the friends
 this week & that if she wanted to go to them
 was the time.
 It is called
 So she found the
 had both some letter. Mary looked at them
 in her room
 & they went
 Mrs. The read them

I shall come to Weymouth to-night. It was never so cold on earth as now here. Mrs Tudor was here this noon & said she had written to Anne. She is better. I have seen Mrs Loring, who takes a table. So with Mrs May & Myself, Mrs Sargent, Mrs Cady, Mrs Attenson, Mrs Garrison & Mary Chapman, who is going to be a pillar, with Lydia Fair's for aid, we shall do. Mrs Stearns will probably take a month, & Mrs Child will fill up any deficiency.

to me in the Library, on the table.

I have distributed to those eyes, their invitations, & shall issue a directory & get the rest off at New-York, some of I have them to town to put in here, if that be important as a statement of my residence.

No news. Seward seems to have said, "Suffering, - it is not a time when speeches can do any thing but fill up the time till something happens.
So as the least said is soonest mended, let us talk as much & say as little as possible, till something happens.
I should judge that opinion was winning in town here, favourably:
But all the whole line of N. Y. conventions are being mobbed, & talking of the speech when they sought to be talking of Anti-Slavery. I Judge Wendell is preparing myself to criticize several Speeches! Perhaps I am mistaken but he only means to find them bits & pieces as he goes.

Mary is made miserable by this cold weather. I should think it would kill her, & under the circumstances deemed it my duty to say, both at W. P. & "Mary Problems" that I was seriously alarmed lest the lack of scrubbing her to the cold, should be even now laying the foundation of fatal disease.

No more at present.

Yours all

M. L.
